My dear Mr. Richardson:

I have studied carefully your book "Fundamentals of Mathematics" and I find it quite stimulating and of considerable educational value. There is no field where the results are used with less understanding and insight than in mathematics and I am convinced that your work will bring to many young and old students the kind of satisfaction that only deeper insight and enlightenment can procure.

Very sincerely yours,

P.S. I have shown your book to a man who is quite influential in educational matters of New York State and I hope this will contribute to the very deserved recognition of your work.
